The cigarette lighter was invented before the match.

I was looking for some trivia for next month's newsletter and came across this interesting, although probably useless fact.

Today I found out that lighters were invented before the match.

This one had me scratching my head for a bit. There are several sites out there that say the match came first. However, by definition of the "match", they are incorrect. The match they are referring to, the one they say came before the lighter, was nothing more than sticks (not tooth-pick size, but actual sticks, they found laying around) soaked with a flammable chemical for easy lighting later with tinder. The sticks then burst into flame when you provided sparks or fire by some other means. So when someone tells me that, "What does the definition of "Match" say... It states, "a slender piece of wood, cardboard, or other flammable material tipped with a chemical substance that produces fire when rubbed on a rough or chemically prepared surface." matches were invented in Northern China in 577, I'll say, "define Match." It wasn't until 1826 that a man by the name of John Walker from England invented the first actual match. However, Walker's matches weren't very reliable so the match (at the time) never really saw success. It wasn't until 5 years later a man named Charles Sauria of France managed to develop a match that used white phosphorus. These little beauties were a little too successful. They often would ignite even when you didn't want them to. And, as it turned out, white phosphorus was highly toxic. The workers who worked in the match plant often suffered from a horrible degeneration of the jawbone, known as "phossy jaw."

So what about the lighter? They were invented in the 16th century out of nothing more than a converted flintlock pistol. Now you can argue that a pistol is no lighter. This is true. But if you look up the definition of "Lighter" in the dictionary, it states; "A mechanical device used in lighting fires, cigarettes, cigars, or pipes." So by definition, the converted pistol

Forever Young

Wednesday, September 13 at 2 pm

In 1939 Captain Daniel McCormick (Gibson) was a test pilot who was on the verge of asking his childhood sweetheart Helen (Glasser) to marry him. However tragedy strikes when Helen is hurt in a car accident, six months pass and she is still in a coma. Daniel asks his best friend Harry Finley (Wendt) if he could be the specimen for Harry's cryogenics project, soon enough he is in a deep frozen sleep and wants to be woken up when Helen gets better. It's 50 years later and two boys Nat (Wood) and Felix (Gorman) accidentally stumble upon Daniel and he's brought back to life, he becomes friends with Nat's mother Claire (Curtis) who introduces him into the 1990's. Forever Young is a very romantic love story and it proves that love waits forever. . PG
